May meeting

This month will be a double feature.

Phil Charvat, who had to cancel last month, is back with an updated analysis of the numismatic market.

Bill Kamb has been collecting Newfoundland coins and tokens for 40 years but recently has rediscovered collecting coins from circulation. Last year he talked about his experience with nickels and this year he will talk about pennies.

It all started four years ago when his grandson, who lives in Atlanta, thought he might be interested in coin collecting. When Bill went for a visit he brought some Whitman penny and nickel folders and got some rolls of each at a bank for them to search. Back home, Bill continued searching and went back and forth from pennies to nickels but then decided to concentrate on nickels. Occasionally, he would send his findings to his daughter, who would mix the coins into her change for his grandson to find.

After completing the Jefferson nickel set in 15 months, Bill switched back to pennies and will talk about what he's found so far, conducting an interesting show & tell. You will be amazed at what you can find. By the way, his grandson lost interest in coins when he discovered sports.

April meeting

Gerry Tebben gave a presentation on Taxes and Coins -- illuminating us on the history of coinage in relation to the taxes peoples have been required to pay over the ages.

Treasurer Jim Huffman gives $45 to Kevin Tyson, who took home the 50/50.

Ohio State Coin Show update

Most of our dealers have returned their contracts and applications and at least a deposit for this year's show. I still have a couple to contact. The deadline for my receipt of their deposit was May 1, 2023.

ANACS is returning to the show for grading opinions and submissions.

We are sending out 2,167 post cards this year. There is an increase coming for the post card postage on July 9th, 2023, so we will be mailing them out by July 1st.

The other big news about the show is we may be experiencing a large increase in the security bill. We will be addressing this issue at the BOD meeting on Tuesday, May 16. The budget for the show will be discussed and approved at that time.

I cannot believe that the show is just three and one-half months away. The Bourse Team is kicking into overdrive now! I cannot wait to see you all in action again. Thank you for being there. -- Patty

PCGS boxes

PCGS left behind a couple hundred used grey, blue, black and gold 20-slab boxes at the Central States show. I glommed onto about 75 and am selling them for $3 a piece - less than half the new price - as a fundraiser for the Mid-Ohio Foodbank.

I'll bring them to the meeting. If you pay by check, you can make it out to Mid-Ohio Foodbank and take a tax deduction -- Gerry

Portal presentation

Steve Petty gave an online presentation on the sale of his Seated Liberty dollar collection as part of the Newman Numismatic Portal symposium at the Central States Numismatic Society show in late April. A banking tale

This Red Book sits on the back counter of my credit union

I have been using the same credit union for a number of years now. I'm in the habit of asking if they have taken in any unusual coins. Ginny, the office manager, and I were talking one day when she mentioned her father was in a coin club in Chicago; she had attended a few shows growing up. She asked if I could help her identify a coin she had. She would bring it in and let me examine it. A time later she handed me an object that reminded me of a lead sinker. She allowed me to take it with me. I was puzzled by the piece; I brought it with me to the next CONA meeting to get opinions. I only had to show it to Geoff; he identified it immediately as a Kingdom of Siam bullet coin, maybe a baht. I was able to learn a bit more about the piece and reported back to Ginny.

Fast forward several months. I went into the credit union, and Ginny told me a customer had brought in a bunch of silver coins and wanted to deposit them. The tellers tried to explain that the coins were worth more than face value. The customer only wanted to deposit them, so they took the deposit. The tellers had divided them up. I offered to take them to Dan's monthly show in Hilliard and sell them for a few of the tellers. I sold maybe $8 or $9 face value. I was able to get them a competitive price for the coins.

I would encourage us as numismatists to develop a relationship with our financial institutions and talk with the tellers. I have given several old Red Books to different institutions along with my business card and the offer to look over anything they take in over the counter.
